

Northampton County Executive Summit

Housing and workforce stability
Transportation and mobility
Equity and access to services
Data sharing and coordination across programs
Infrastructure and environmental resilience

The summit featured facilitated committee sessions, cross-committee breakouts, and a “Red Light–Green Light” exercise designed to identify both immediate and longer-term action items. Outcomes from the day will inform the county’s 100-Day Action Plan as well as a long-term four-year Strategic Framework.

Zrinski described the summit as an example of “government with, not over, people,” emphasizing her administration’s commitment to transparency and co-creation. “Power is something we build with others,” she said. “When government listens first and acts collaboratively, we don’t just make better policy—we build trust, equity, and resilience.”

Survey responses revealed strong alignment around near-term actions related to housing stability, human services improvement, and regional collaboration. Participants emphasized the need for increased cross-municipal planning on land use, support for county housing and reentry task forces, and advisory groups with meaningful input into policy decisions.

Looking ahead, Zrinski outlined a roadmap for both immediate progress and long-term structural change. “In the next 100 days, we can show that listening leads to action—taking concrete steps on housing, human services, and inclusion,” she said.

“Over the next four years, we will keep this table open and keep sharing power, building more affordable, sustainable, and just Northampton County.”

The county will release a full Executive Summit Outcomes Report later this month, summarizing key takeaways, committee priorities, and proposed next steps.
