Known as "Wales in America" the exhibit shows folk art made by quarry workers in twelve panels that were arranged by the Welsh Assembly Government in New York which worked with the National Museum of Wales, the National Library of Wales, The National Union of Miners Library and the St. David's Welsh Society of the Slate Belt. Donald M. Jones of the St. David's Welsh Society of the Slate Belt cut the ribbon to open the exhibit at a ceremony that occurred at 11 a.m. on Friday. The panels will be at the Slate Belt Heritage Center until August 1st of this year.
