Legacy Vines Winery Opens in Gilbert

By Sierra Lefurgy

GILBERT, PA — Legacy Vines Winery in Gilbert, Pennsylvania, is proud to announce its opening as the first Black-owned winery in the Pocono Mountains and the fourth in the state of Pennsylvania. Founded by husband-and-wife team Shantelle and Brian Davis, the winery blends their passion for wine, food, and hospitality to create a unique experience for both locals and visitors.

Legacy Vines Winery is an extension of the Davises' longtime local business, Willie Mae's Place, a beloved community gathering space. Following the recent birth of their first child, the couple transitioned away from daily restaurant service and reimagined the space as a destination for curated wine experiences and special events.

"Our goal has always been to create something meaningful for the community," said Shantelle Davis. "Legacy Vines Winery allows us to share our love of wine, food, and family while creating unique experiences for guests in the Poconos."

Legacy Vines Winery focuses on guided tastings and curated food and wine experiences, offering a more personal alternative to larger wineries. Guests can enjoy intimate tastings with the owners while learning about the winemaking process and enjoying thoughtfully paired food.
