New Guide Helps Create Women's Commissions

By State Rep. Ann Flood

The Governor's Advisory Commission on Women has released a new Guide to Starting a County Commission for Women, a practical resource to help counties create local advisory bodies that elevate women's voices and experiences.

As a member of the Governor's Advisory Commission on Women, I'm pleased to share this resource with communities across Pennsylvania.

Access the guide here.

The guide provides counties with a practical, nonpartisan roadmap for establishing a local Commission for Women. It includes tools for community listening and engagement, a blueprint for building a Commission and ready-to-use bylaws and templates to help counties get started.

Shaped by stories shared during the State of the Woman Listening Tour, the guide provides a sustainable way for counties to continue the conversation and create lasting structures where women's voices can help inform local decisions.

Local communities that establish a Commission for Women are encouraged to connect with the Commission at women@pa.gov.
