Monroe County Historical Assoc. Presentation

By Amy Leiser

STROUDSBURG - Emmy Award-winning meteorologist and author to give free presentation titled "Historic Storms and the Role of Climate Change in Pennsylvania and the Poconos" at the Stroud Mansion Museum and Library.

The Monroe County Historical Association is pleased to announce a free presentation with East Stroudsburg native Ben Gelber on Wednesday, October 7, 2026, at the Stroud Mansion Museum and Library, 900 Main Street, Stroudsburg, PA 18360. Gelber, an Emmy Award-winning meteorologist for NBC4 in Columbus, Ohio, will give his presentation, "Historic Storms and the Role of Climate Change in Pennsylvania and the Poconos," at 7:00 pm.

Inducted into the East Stroudsburg High School Meritorious Hall of Fame in 2004, Ben was already a student meteorologist in the third grade, giving daily morning classroom forecasts. He constructed a backyard weather station during his high school years, beginning a long-term dataset in the Poconos in 1970, with the help of his parents, who maintained the records, which are part of NOAA's National Centers for Environmental Information historical archives.
